A major impact of the Covid-19 pandemic has been the challenge of providing opportunities for social and emotional development outside of the home. This summer we are dedicating the 7-week summer program to activities and experiences that encourage development in the following areas:

Self-identity: Children have a positive self-identity.

Sense of competence: Children feel they are competent.

Emotions: Children recognize, label, and regulate their feelings.

Empathy: Children demonstrate empathy toward others.

Community: Children participate in the community of the classroom.

Building relationships: Children build relationships with other children and adults.

Cooperative play: Children engage in cooperative play.

Moral development: Children develop an internal sense of right and wrong.

Conflict resolution: Children resolve social conflicts.

It will be a summer packed with art experiences, board games, academic tools, STEM challenges, literature, mindfulness training, Yoga and breathing, music, movement, and pretend play, all designed with the goal of giving children opportunities to practice social and emotional skills. The theme is TRANSPORTATION, and we will be integrating the teaching of the 7 Habits of Highly Effective Children and the Zones of Regulation Curriculum.
